

Eda Selebatso

Eda Selebatso is married to Moses Selebatso. They are blessed with four children, two of whom have rare conditions. Eda and Moses founded Botswana organisation for Rare Diseases (BORDIS) inspired by the challenges they faced with their children with rare diseases. Eda is the current Chairperson of BORDIS. Eda is currently studying towards an MBA. She holds a PgD in Project Management from Management College of Southern Africa. She has graduated with a BSc in Biology and Chemistry from the University of Botswana.

Eda is passionate about human development issues. She has worked for the Ministry of Health (MoH) in Botswana as a Project Manager (2012-2014) and a Research Officer (2009-2012). She resigned due to the ill health of her children. Eda has also worked as a wildlife biologist for the Department of wildlife and national parks (DWNP) in Botswana before transferring to the MoH, leaving her position as National Rhino Coordinator. Eda Selebatso has led and contributed to several innovations in her country during her career. She continues as a pioneer in rare diseases in Botswana and hopes to make her impact in Africa and globally because she believes a person with a rare condition is worthy of life, and equally have potential to contribute to society.
